THE LINTON-MICHAEL RACE TO-DAY.

The races are amnounced to begin at 3:30 p. m., which will make it impossible to start the big race until after 6 o'clock. Those who are accustomed to getting home from race meets for an early dinner might as well abandon this idea for to-day. The

While the besting to date has been about even, those in a possible to know predict that there will be pienty of money to waser on Mishael at the track to-day. At the horse races it is an oil saying to back the short end in a match race. Thus far there has been so little open hetting on theyele racing that it looks like a hard problem. Linton is said to have the best pacemakers, and, barring accidents, he ought to win. At least, that is the opinion of those who have made paced racing a close study. Uniton's friends are confident that he will win, but whether they will back this opinion with cash will remain to be seen.

It was announced yesterday that Taylore, the Frenchman, had ridden five miles, behind pace, in $2.7. If he did this he best the world's record by two and four-fith seconds. The figures will not be accepted as a record.

The Commission will have a foint meeting of a preliminary kind at Quebec some time in August, but does not expect to begin actual work until some time in September. The Commission did not make public the subjects which are to be considered, having referred this to the Secretary of State to make public such matters in his discretion.

The Commissioners held another session this afternoon, Charles H. Butler was designated as an expert examiner to assist in preparing the cases before the Commission. It appears that the appointment of Mr. Coolidge as a member of the Commission is due to the determination to have Newfoundland, which is separate from the Canadian Dominion Government, represented on the Commission. The Premier of Newfoundland was named for this place, thus raising the British Canadian Commission to six. In order to equalize the Commission, President McKiniey selected Mr. Coolidge as the sixth American member. When the Commission adjourned this evening it was until August 19, when the reassembling will be at Quebec, with the British and Canadian Commission. In the mean time the cases will be prepared at the State Department, and a request is made that all communications to the American Commission be addressed to Secretary Anderson, care of the State Department.

When bids were opened for this contract last march it was found that the Purcell company's hid was $20,000 lower than any others on the Government standard paper, and Postmaster-General Gary, after an investigation of the company's responsibility, awarded the contract to it. The Morgan-Plympton Envelope Company, of Hartford, Conn., began a strong fight to have the contract set aside, and the present Postmaster-General, who came into office immediately after the award, has been besieged daily by parties interested. After a thorough investigation and full consideration he has determined to act as announced.

The large number of small fee subscribers upset their calculations, however, and the banks are now scouring the market. The demand from private investors also keeps up unahated. From present indications it is predicted in most quarters that the bonds will bring a premium of more than 6 per cent. The delivery of the bonds has been amounced to begin on Monday, at which time $30,000 of the $500 denomination and $20,000 of the $20 bonds will be issued. After Monday the Treasury bepartment expects to be able to deliver about 10,000 bonds a day. A MONUMENT FROM SPANISH CANNON. TO MOULD RELICS OF SPAIN'S FORMER GREAT-NESS INTO A MEMORIAL OF

AMERICAN HEROES.

To the Editor of The Tribune. Sir: In reading your most interesting accounts of the engagements at and around Santiago, Cuba, I notice you make reference to the old brass and bronze cannon found there. These relies of Spain's former greatness are to be found in all Cuban seaports; there are also found inland many of the smaller bronze cannon which were used for what is known in Cuba as mounted artillery. small guns are carried on the backs of mules

As these bronze cannon will be of no practical use to the Government, would it not be a good idea if enough of them could be brought to this ountry to have them cast into a monument to the memory of the American soldiers and satiors who have lost their lives in Cuba in the present Such a monument placed in the city of Washington would be a tribute to the bravery of our American Army and Navy, as well as prove a lasting monument to America's interest in hu-manity in its effort to crush out Spanish rule in the West Indies. the West Indies.

If this matter meets with your approval I hope you will take it up in good earnest and advocate the matter if it is feasible.

WHY GENERAL DIX DREW A PENSION.

To the Editor of The Tribune. Sir: The criticism of F. C. Murdock in Tuesday's Tribune deprecating the drawing of a pension by well-to-do pensioners calls to mind an anecdote of General John A. Dix. The time was in the Civil War. The General was seen in line before a pension agency by an intimate friend, who took him to task somewhat after this fashion: "General, I am ashamed to see you here. You.

rich, receiving a large salary as commander of this district, and in the hour of your country's distress, drawing a pension, and you do not need it!"

The General responded: "I am glad that you have spoken so freely, sir. Every word of that is true. I am rich. I do receive a large salary. My country is in distress for money, and I do not need the pension. But I am here to draw my pension hecause I am entitled to it. I served my country in a previous war, and was wounded in that service. The understanding has always been in this country that in war the seidler should not be paid full wages. But afterward, for wounds or for incapacity incurred from that service, he should be paid a pension. That, sir, was the agreement, just as it has been in all our wars, and in order that no poor soldier shall be ashamed to stand up for his pension I am here to give him countenance by drawing mine. Furthermore, as a patriot I speak. This Nation, so long as this system of pensioning the wounded soldier lasts, shall never want for soldiers; nor shall they lack the fighting spirit."

I am not a pensioner, but I read with regret the proposition from a Tribune contributor that certain pensioners give up their pittance as a conpair; Vests, 75c. Short notes of two good patriotism sunk so low or is this Government so poor that any old veteran should give up his pen-sion to help the richest Nation on earth prosecute

I have seen communications in other journals expressing a feeling of thankfulness that, in the course of nature, the pension roll would soon be reduced by the death of our country's defenders, and I suppose that there are people to-day, as there were at the time of the Rebellion, who would bleed the Government at every opportunity, and rush to Canada to escape a draft, returning when war was ended to raise their voices against men who risked life and health in their

It were a better policy to advocate an increas f pensions at this time than to cry out agains

It were a better policy to advocate an increase of pensions at this time than to ery out against them, that our men in the field might indulge the hope that when the war is ended they will be cared for by a grateful country.

If gratitude and patriotism are dead in some breasts, let the Government pay its old veterans the money which is rightly their due—the difference between the gold value of a deliar which they expected to receive and the depreciated paper deliar which they are justly entitled—and many a poor veteran would be placed beyond want, in which condition his sacrifices for his country have placed him. Fetter by far that the people should be taxed half of their possessions than that our country's defenders should suffer because of their devotion.

APPROACHING THE FINAL DIVIDEND. To the Editor of The Tribune.

Sir: The earth's surface has been pretty thoroughly explored. Its extent of area, with its distribution of land and water, has been practically as-certained. There are no new worlds to conquer, no vague regions of wonder to allure the imagination and stir the spirit of untried advanture.

broad current of emigration, following the course of the sun from Abraham to the modern argonauts, has been the seene of clashing tribes and contend-ing hordes, through whose conflicts and coalitions the virile races have been developed. We are approaching the final division of the world's unused and misused assets. Our reconcentrado friends who fancy that our institutions, like Tam o' Shanter's witches, are incapacitated for crossing water, will find, when the greatest maritime race inherits the abitsed and betrayed dependence of Spain, we shall not be found wanting in the ability and dispession to reclaim the waste places and to make the world's deserts bloom and blossom as the rose.

SPANIARDS AND THEIR PROVERB. To the Editor of The Tribune.

Apparently the Spaniards of our day are living up to the standard they set for themselves in the time of Bacon. They tell pienty of ites, and, verily, they will find out plent/of truth.

W. T. H. STRUGGLING CROWDS ON THE BRIDGE.

To the Editor of The Tribune. Str: Persons who are compelled to cross the Brooklyn Bridge can appreciate your timely editorial in Saturday's paper, and should heartly thank you for it. Under the present management the conditions are simply shocking. If any one the conditions are simply shocking. If any one has a desire to get an idea of the scenes surrounding the dreadful wreck of La Bourgogne, he should visit the Bridge any day during rush hours and witness the struggling, surging, perspiring, desperate crowd trying to force itself to the cars. You failed to note in your editorial that under the new management the side doors to the regular Bridge cars are not opened, as heretofore, so that ingress and egress are only by the front and rear platforms, thus unnecessarily adding to the discomfort of the unfortunate passenger. How long?
